give their full attention to the speaker and concentrate on what is being said. Students use body position, listening skills, and response techniques to maximize their understanding as well as convey that they are listening to the speaker. Components and Skills of Active Listening:

Active Listening - Success for Every Student

I give my students Active Listening Note Taking Cards to first practice recording thoughtful questions and comments while listening to promote active thinking and listening. Note-taking often eliminates student distractions as they are focused on the speaker and the note-taking task at hand, plus they have their questions and comments ready when the speaker is ready.
